CIVILIZATIONS CRUMBLE AFTER INVASION

Two of the many major empires of the Americas no longer exist. Both empires were in power for about 100 years. The Aztec empire dominated most of central Mexico. The Inca empire spread over much of the Andes. Both empires were located in areas with many ecosystem goods and services that helped them grow. However, both these empires rapidly collapsed after the arrival of people who called themselves “Spanish.” The Spanish valued different ecosystem goods and ecosystem services. These invaders quickly dominated the Aztec and Inca empires and sent many resources back to Europe.
